MEDIA RELEASE

Australians in Spain – You Count as Well !

In August 2006, the Australian Bureau of Statistics counted everyone in Australia.

But the 2006 Australian Census didn't take into account Australia's sizable diaspora of approximately one million people.

More than 5,000 Australians are estimated to be living permanently in Spain, and thousands more visit as tourists or work and study in Spain for short periods.

Finding all of Australia's unofficial ambassadors currently spread throughout Spain would be an impossible task. But those that can be reached online, via the media, through various Australian expatriate organisations, and through their families and friends are being strongly encouraged to participate in a new independent non-governmental online survey of the Australian diaspora.

An initiative of the New York-based organisation Advance working in partnership with the Southern Cross Group, One Million More – the Census of Australians Abroad has already become the largest ever survey of Australians outside Australia.

Since its launch on Australian census day on 8 August 2006, more than 5700 overseas Australians have participated.

But a global hunt is still on to track down thousands more of the "missing million" before the survey closes on 30 September 2006.

Taking approximately 20 minutes to complete on an entirely anonymous basis, the One Million More survey asks Australia's far-flung citizens, former citizens and others overseas with a very close family connection to the country to respond to some key questions adapted from the official Australian Census. It also includes specific questions designed to get to the heart of the experiences and issues faced by those living outside Australia.

Australians in Spain are a diverse group of all ages. Some migrated to Australia post-World War II and then returned to live in Spain later in life. Others who were born in Australia to Spanish migrants and grew up Down Under have now come to Italy to live and work in the country of their parents' or grandparents' birth. And other Australians, without a Spanish family connection, have adopted Spain as their temporary or permanent home for educational, professional or personal reasons, or perhaps because they've fallen in love with Spanish culture and the Spanish lifestyle.

La Corunna-based Southern Cross Group volunteer Barry McGinley Jones said "Spain offers Australians some wonderful opportunities and it's no wonder that so many Australians are to be found here. We hope that One Million More will enable us to collect up-to-date, extensive and specific data about them. The data will be an indispensable tool going forward for all those concerned with developing and fostering Australia's relationship with its extensive diaspora." Mr McGinley Jones is an Australian who has lived in Spain for more than 35 years. He also serves as the Vice President of the Australia Spain Business Association (ASBA).

The data collected will be used in further academic research to be undertaken at Adelaide University by Professor Graeme Hugo, already widely known for his pioneering studies of the Australian diaspora. In addition, the Southern Cross Group will draw on the survey findings to guide its ongoing advocacy and support efforts and inform its continuing dialogue with the Australian government on diaspora issues. All survey results and conclusions will be published on the internet as they become available.

"We ask everyone who knows an Australian in Spain to let them know about One Million More and urge them to take part. Every single one of them is an integral part of Australia." Mr McGinley Jones said.

One Million More – the Census of Australians Abroad will remain online until Saturday 30 September 2006.

About the Southern Cross Group

The Southern Cross Group is an international non-profit volunteer-run and independently-funded advocacy and support organisation for the Australian diaspora. The SCG takes an inclusive approach in defining the Australian overseas community and works on behalf of everyone in that community, regardless of their age, educational background, occupation, professional status or income. Those who are not technically Australian citizens but who are former citizens or future citizens or otherwise have a very close family connection with Australia are also within the SCG's constituency. Since its formation in early 2000, the SCG has established a consistent track record of intelligent and timely submissions to Government on a host of Australian expatriate issues, taking the lead in establishing "the Australian diaspora" firmly in Australian domestic consciousness. The Group is best known for its work in reforming Australian citizenship law. It has also been active on the issue of expatriate disenfranchisement in the Australian electoral process, and was the driving force behind the establishment of a broad-based dedicated Federal Senate Committee Inquiry into Australian expatriates held in 2003-2005. The SCG is run by 100 volunteers in 30 countries. It has no formal members or membership fees. People interested in keeping abreast of the SCG's activities are invited to sign up to its occasional free e-bulletins.
